

Call for Papers

Special Issue on the Caribbean

Titled

Contemporary Caribbean Justice Issues

Journal of Ethnicity in Criminal Justice

Guest Editors: Dr. Camille Gibson, Prairie View A&M University - cbgibson@pvamu.edu and Dr. Francis Daniel Niña - University of Puerto Rico; francis.nina@upr.edu

The Journal of Ethnicity in Criminal Justice explores the prejudice that currently affects our judicial system, our courts, our prisons, and our neighborhoods all around the world. This unique multidisciplinary journal is the only publication that focuses exclusively on crime, criminal justice, and ethnicity/race. In it, there are insightful commentaries, position papers, and examinations of new and existing legislation by scholars and professionals committed to the study of ethnicity and criminal justice.

All research articles in this journal have undergone rigorous peer review by at least two double-anonymized reviews plus by the editor initially screening and reviewing the submissions before being sent out for review. Submission is online via ScholarOne Manuscripts.

The Journal welcomes quality submissions from local and international academics, policymakers and justice professionals.

- Victimization and fear of crime
- Criminal justice policy/law-making
- Caribbean criminal justice systems
- Organized crime in the Caribbean
- Gender and crime
- Gangs
- Crime Prevention
- White-collar crime
- Gender-based violence

The manuscripts should follow the APA manual of style, version 7 format. The manuscripts should be between 20-25 pages, including References/Bibliography, double-spaced.

Manuscripts should be submitted through the Taylor and Francis submission system, which can be accessed through <https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/wecj/>.

Please indicate that your manuscript is submitted for the special issue: Contemporary Caribbean Justice Issues.

DEADLINE: We encourage those who are interested to submit an Abstract to the Editor of the journal by October 31, 2024. If approved, manuscripts are due by February 28, 2024. Please be aware of these deadlines because manuscripts will not be accepted if they are late.